The Department of Science and Technology (DOST) Secretary Mario Montejo declared Cauayan City in Isabela, Cagayan Valley as the first Smarter City in the region and the first among 144 cities in the country. Sec. Montejo made the pronouncement during the recent Region 2 leg of DOST's "Science Nation: Agham na Ramdam" nationwide roadshow.

Cauayan City is also the first local government unit in the region to unite all its barangays in implementing Juan Time – a DOST campaign for the synchronization of all watches, clocks, and time setting devices in the country.

DOST launches 'smarter cities'

By RAINER ALLAN RONDA

The Department of Science and Technology (DOST) launched its Smarter City program in transition information and communications technology (ICT) to improve the delivery of government services with the regional rollout of the program in Cauayan City, Isabela, on Monday.

DOST Secretary Mario Montejo, accompanied by DOST Regional Director Rainer Allan Ronda, launched the program in Cauayan City during a ceremony at the City Hall on Monday.

Montejo said that during the ICT ministerial meeting in Ansan, Thailand, the concept of a Smarter City was presented as the target direction of all member countries.

He further explained that a Smarter City concept involved the installation of CCTV cameras all over a city to collect data, and then processing the data into intelligence or useful information for the community.

Data gathered from the CCTV cameras can include traffic flow, weather situation, fire outbreaks or other calamities.

Montejo said there is analytics technology that can be used by the DOST and city governments to process all the data into intelligent and useful information.

"With all the data, you can come up with important information for decision making for outcomes that the public will really appreciate," he said.

Montejo said they were delighted to have Cauayan City as a partner in the pilot effort to establish a Smarter City in the Philippines.

Cauayan City has established a city identification system with a computerized database, as well as an e-governance system where all business transactions like the issuance of business permits and

THE Department of Science and Technology (DOST) declared Cauayan City in Isabela, Cagayan Valley, as the first "Smarter City" in the region and the first among 144 cities in the Philippines.

Science Secretary Mario Montejo made the pronouncement during the recent Cagayan Valley leg of DOST's "Science Nation: Agham na Ramdam" nationwide roadshow. Cauayan City is also the first local government unit in the region to unite all its barangays in implementing Juan Time—a DOST campaign for the synchronization of all watches, clocks and time-setting devices in the country, including office bundy clocks, to abide by the Philippine standard time. Juan Time, likewise, aims to promote a culture of punctuality among Filipinos. Under the DOST Smarter Philippines Program, a Smarter City means that a city has put in place enough information communication technology (ICT) infrastructure that are "instrumented" through the merging of data, "interconnected" through networks, and "intelligent" through data trends.

History

HISTORY

Cauayan is a city in Isabela situated in the center of this big and naturally rich province. The town got its name from the word "Cauayan" meaning bamboo in the dialect of Gaddang, the early settlers of this place. How it got its name is told vaguely by the natives in the tale about how the early Spaniards who reached the place found abundant growths of bamboo trees along creeks that circled the town site namely Bulod, Sipat, Bungkol, and Marabulig creeks where few
